

SEMINAR:

Do parties really want evaluative or facilitative mediation?

Contents

An increasing theme in mediations seems to be parties thinking that at the end of the process, if there is no agreement, then the mediator will give a view on the dispute. Is that because of unclear advice before the mediation, a misunderstanding of what is mediation or do the parties really want this type of mediation? This event will look at these issues and engage with practitioners present to see if there is a problem or an opportunity here.

Guest Speaker

Mr. Robert Gerrard

Robert is an Accredited Mediator in the United Kingdom and a Panel Member of Hong Kong Mediation Centre who focuses on civil and commercial mediation, drawing from over 30 years' experience mainly in the construction and engineering industry. He is a Chartered Quantity Surveyor by profession. He is a Fellow of Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors, Chartered Institute of Arbitrators and Chartered Institution of Civil Engineering Surveyors.
